Introducing LAR

Since its foundation in 1988, Luxembourg Air Rescue a.s.b.l. (LAR) has dedicated itself to its corporate purpose: saving lives and keeping people out of danger by operating rescue helicopters and ambulance aircraft in Luxembourg, the Greater Region and throughout the world 365 days a year. LAR applies the highest safety and quality standards in everything it does.

LAR is the only air rescue organisation in the Grand Duchy and, in the event of a medical emergency, its rescue helicopters, which are equipped as intensive care units, can reach anywhere in Luxembourg within 10 minutes.

Since 1998, LAR has also been carrying out worldwide medical repatriations and intensive care transport, using its own state-of-the-art medical aircraft and its own medical staff.

Many people owe their lives to LAR's rapid air response! Since its creation, LAR has travelled over 44 million kilometres to rescue people in distress, equivalent to circumnavigating the globe 1,200 times!

Introducing LAR

LAR employs around 190 specialists (pilots, doctors, nurses, engineers, technicians, etc.) to ensure that, in the event of a medical emergency, its members can be repatriated professionally and in the best conditions, with a specialised LAR medical team always by their side.

Thanks to the invaluable support of its 183,000 members, Luxembourg Air Rescue is today one of the world's leading air rescue organisations.

"OUR MEMBERS ARE OUR RAISON D'ÊTRE"

- ▶ 183,000 members
- ▶ 190 specialists
- ▶ More than 30 years of experience
- ▶ 31,000 helicopter missions
- ▶ More than 11,500 air-ambulance missions

We fly for your life

Introducing LAR

The importance of air rescue

Introducing LAR

When the prognosis is life-threatening, it is vital that the emergency doctor gets to the patient as fast as possible. The LAR rescue helicopter is the fastest way the emergency doctor can arrive on the scene, allowing him to care for the patient - who may well be in severe distress - stabilize his or her condition and ensure his or her transport to hospital in the safest possible conditions.

In those medical emergencies in which the patient's life depends on immediate surgery, LAR's rescue helicopter guarantees that the patient gets to the operating room as rapidly as possible.

Often, only a transfer to a specialized hospital within or outside Luxembourg territory can save the life of a patient in intensive care and only the LAR rescue helicopter can perform this quickly and smoothly.

How does medical repatriation work?

1

First contact by phone

From your first call to the LAR alert centre you will be immediately connected to qualified LAR experts who will assess your situation, provide you with a diagnosis, confirm your precise location, collate your personal medical data and acquire contact information for the treating physician abroad in order to provide you with sufficient support with a minimum of notice.

How does medical repatriation work?

Doctor-to-doctor dialogue

After being notified, the experts of LAR's alert centre will immediately contact the doctor treating the patient on the spot in order to clarify all the medical circumstances and determine how to carry out an effective repatriation.

Decisive criteria include on-site treatment options and medical facilities, as well as the risk of complications following surgery or illness.

Means of transport for possible repatriation include LAR air ambulance, commercial airliner, rescue helicopter or ground ambulance.

How does medical repatriation work?

Medical repatriation

Where it is determined that the patient requires intensive care, a "bed-to-bed" transfer is performed, i.e. the LAR medical team directly picks up the patient from his or her hospital bed at the location abroad. The medical team will then prepare the patient for repatriation and continue to monitor his or her vital signs right up until the arrival at the hospital in the patient's home country.
